

Vesna Nuon declares for Lowell City Council
Seeks return to represent all of Lowell

For Immediate Release

LOWELL - Monday, May 22, 2017 - Vesna Nuon, former city councilor and long-time community activist, announces his candidacy for Lowell City Council. "Lowell is a stronger city when every resident has the opportunity to participate in government," said Nuon. "I look forward to engaging everyone, to hear their ideas and know their needs."

Nuon, who lives in the Highlands neighborhood, has lived in Lowell for 26 years and raised a family in the city. "I feel the need to continue to give back to this great and diverse community which has given me so much," he said.

Nuon is active throughout Lowell and has served on a variety of boards and committees including the boards of the United Teen Equality Center and the Cambodian American League of Lowell, the Lowell Zoning Board of Appeals, and the Clemente Park Advisory Committee. "I feel my diverse experience can bring perspective to the Lowell City Council and I will seek to connect with community members throughout Lowell to hear their thoughts and concerns," Nuon said. Dedicated to public service, Nuon served in the Middlesex County District Attorney's Office and currently serves on a statewide public safety board.

As a City Councilor from 2012 to 2013, Nuon sought to increase representation and build community trust. "We have made great strides," Nuon said, "I want to help ensure that progress continues by supporting our police officers and enhancing community-oriented policing efforts that continue to build trust within the community."

As a councilor, Nuon seeks to make economic development a priority. "Lowell is historically a textile city; through our major economic development projects like the Hamilton Canal District, the Lord Overpass, and the Rourke Bridge, we have the opportunity to weave the fabric of our neighborhoods together to bolster economic development and build a strong city that will be resilient for years to come and," said Nuon.

"I have always believed in this amazing city, and I will seek to make a positive difference every day on the City Council," Nuon said.
